

All businesses that use the internet, need cyber risk insurance.

Do I need cyber risk insurance? The answer is YES. A cyber risk insurance policy is designed to help an organization mitigate risk exposure by offsetting costs involved with recovery after a cyber-related security breach or similar event.

It's a Matter of Protection

Due to the prevalence and cost of data breaches, cyber risk insurance started catching on in 2005 and now the total value of premiums is forecasted to reach $7.5 billion by 2020. According to PwC, about one third of U.S. companies currently purchase some type of cyber insurance. In-house security networks and processes provide the alerts and protection. If breached, they don't provide the financial recovery support.

What's Covered?

Cyber risk insurance typically covers expenses related to the first parties as well as claims by third parties. Common reimbursable expenses include investigation, business losses, privacy and notification, and lawsuits and extortion.
