A look into the National Civics Bee

In Michigan's statewide National Civics Bee competition, middle school students from across the state flex their civics knowledge and compete for the coveted title of Michigan champion. This year, the event carries even greater significance as the nation celebrates its 250th birthday — a milestone that underscores the importance of civic education and engagement. By investing in the Bee, sponsors actively contribute to building a well-informed generation capable of understanding complex policy issues and making informed decisions — all while gaining invaluable exposure and community engagement.
